

Carolyn Roberts

Faculty Member &
Indigenous Teaching Fellow
in the Department of Education

Simon Fraser University

Carolyn Roberts uses her voice to support Indigenous resurgence through education. She is a Coast Salish woman belonging to the Squamish Nation. Carolyn has been an educator and administrator for over 20 years and is currently a Faculty Member and Indigenous teaching Fellow in the Department of Education at Simon Fraser University. She is also a Doctoral student in the eTAP Program. Carolyn's work at SFU is grounded in educating preservice teachers and other faculty about the legacies of colonialism that can still be felt on this land today. Carolyn's doctoral work is rooted in anti-racism and decolonization within teacher education programs. With a focus on creating safer environments and communities for all students within education programs, in hopes that we can shift how we teach and rooting educational practice in relationship, with each other and our students.

Email: mcarolynroberts@gmail.com

Phone#: (604) 528-0586

Social Media: Twitter - @mcarolynroberts